

A must-see for newbies: No matter what kind of thermal insulation paper is attached to the Model 3, it "will not" affect the network and GPS reception!

The Model 3 has a SIM card in the car, a built-in 4G network, and many functional applications. Many car owners worry about how to choose when they stick heat insulation paper. In fact, old car owners have repeatedly reminded: don't worry, because no matter what thermal insulation paper you put on, it will not affect the Model 3 network reception and GPS accuracy.

Shrimp dense? What magic trick did Tesla use to do it? Does it really matter?

It's 100% true, but it's not really a magic trick, the answer lies only in the antenna position.

The original Model 3 is to set the 4G LTE, Wi-Fi and GPS antennas in the left and right rearview mirrors. If there is a modification that needs to be disassembled, you will see the rearview mirrors on both sides of the passenger seat and the driver seat, which are hidden inside. the antenna. Therefore, no matter what kind of thermal insulation paper you choose for the front windshield, window or roof, even if it has metal components, the network reception and GPS signal in the car will not be affected, because the antenna is simply outside the car, and that's it. Simple.

This is something that many old car owners know, and it is inevitable that novices will ignore it, so I still feel that I need to be reminded. Now you know that the thermal insulation paper "will not" affect the Model 3 car's reception. Tesla's approach is very clever, right? ! The only thing to worry about is whether the maintenance cost of the left and right rear-view mirrors will be higher because of the built-in antenna, right? Does anyone have a quote for repairs? XD

★ Intimate reminder ★

Model 3 vehicle reception is not affected by heat insulation paper, but if you are accustomed to installing a navigator in your car or using mobile Internet and mobile navigation, such as this extra device installed in the car room, Of course, the insulation paper is bad, and more research is needed at this time!

Installing the antenna outside the car must have better reception.
